

Should Exotic Reptiles be Sold as Pets?

By: Andres

A lot of people own different pets, but many people in the United States own exotic reptiles and amphibians. Exotic reptiles and amphibians are usually from a different country and not domesticated. Many cities and states have their own laws of what animals, people can have as a pet. For example, Ohio doesn't allow residents to own exotic or dangerous animals after the Exotic Pet Massacre. Some people think that people who get exotic pets don't know how to care for an exotic animal. Snakes usually need expensive cages or vivariums. Other reptiles and amphibians usually need heat lamps and need to be watched often.

Yes, exotic reptiles should be sold as pets → 11 out of 27

No, exotic reptiles should not be sold as pets → 16 out of 27

